Two English Police Strikes Failed

SERIOUS police strikes took place simultaneously in London and Liverpool six weeks ago. The main developments were:

Both strikes were caused by the pending passage of a bill which permitted the organization of a policemen's union, but forbade them to affiliate with other labor bodies and prohibited strikes under heavy penalties. Both strikes lasted about a week.

About a thousand men went out in each city. The disorder was most serious in Liverpool, the damage there being estimated at more than $1,500,000. Several persons were killed and more than a hundred injured. Troops were called to maintain order in both cities.

The strikers were defeated in both cases. The bill against which they protested was passed and most of the men who quit were discharged and

Not Strike, but Desertion

"What are the objections to permitting them to affiliate with the A. F. of L.?"

"Those have been stated so many times that I hardly think it necessary to go into them again. They were stated last night by President Wilson very clearly, but perhaps I might once stated ast night by President Wilson very clearly, but perhaps I might once more suggest the primary objection is that it is fundamental that control of the government and of the maintenance of law and order must remain the hands of the properly constituted authorities."

A Bolshevik wireless message yesterday claimed the capture of nearly 12,000 prisoners from the Kolchak Southern army. To-day's Soviet communiqué also anonunces the capture of a number of prisoners in the Northern Dvina region (the Archangel front). These prisoners, it is declared in the official statement, included some British troops.

The following communiqué, issued by Admiral Kolchak's headquarters at Omsk, was received here to-day:

"Stubborn fighting is going on in the direction of Lalourovsk, in the sector are now engaged in offensive operations in the direction of Koorgan. We have occupied the station at Pieloukhova and are pursuing the enemy along the railway line along the whole front. "We went into this great war, from which we have just issued, with certain assurances given ourselves and given to the world, and those assurances cannot be filled unless this treaty is adopted. We told the world and we assured ourselves that we went into this war in order to see to it that, the kind of purpose represented in this war should never be permitted to be accomplished by Germany or anybody else.

There will be no reform in this world for a generation if the conditions of the world are not now brought to settled order. And they cannot be brought to settled order without the conferration of America.

"If the Senate of the United States passes a resolution of ratification and says that it ratifies on conditions that so and so would be understood, that will have to be resubmitted to every signatory of the treaty, and what gravels me is that it will have to be submitted to the German Assembly at Weimar. And that goes against my digestion. the German Assembly at Weimar. And that goes against my digestion. We cannot honorably put anything in that treaty which Germany has ratified without Germany's consent.

"There isn't any phrase in the covenant of the league of nations that can legitimately be said to be of doubtful meaning, but if the Congress of the United States wants to state the meaning over again in other words and say to the other nations of the world, 'We understand the treaty to mean what is,' I think the treaty to mean what is, I think that is a work of supererogation, but I do not see any moral objection to it."

What Wilson Said In Spokane, Wash.

The text of the President's address in Spokane follows, in part:

in Spokane follows, in part:

"It is provided that any member state may withdraw from the league upon two years' notice, provided that at the time of withdrawal it has fulfilled its national obligations and the obligations under the covenant, and gentlemen object that it is not said who shall determine whether it has fulfilled its international obligations and its obligations under the covenant or not.

"Having sat at the table where the instrument was drawn, I know that that was not done accidentally, because that is a matter upon which no nation can sit in judgment upon another. That is left to the consciences and to the independent determination of the nation that is withdrawing. And there is only one jury that it need fear, and that is the great embodied jury expressing the opinions of mankind.

Question of War Up Question of War Up

To Congress, He Asserts

"There is one part of the covenant—the principal part of it—where it speaks of arbitration and where it speaks of arbitration and where it provides that any member state failing to keep these covenants—these particular covenants—shall be regarded as thereby ipso facto to have committed an act of war against the other members. The way it originally read was: 'Shall thereby ipso facto be deemed at war with the other nations,' and I said: 'No, I cannot agree to that. That provision would put the United States at war without the consent of the Congress of the United States. And I have no right in this part of the covenant, or any other, to consent to a provision which would deprive the Congress of the United States of its free choice whether it makes war or not.'

"At every point in the covenant where it was necessary to do so I insisted upon language which would leave the Congress of the United States free.

"You will say, 'It is all very leave the Congress of the United States free.

"You will say, 'It is all very well what you say about the word of the United States being necessary, provided the United States is one of the parties to the dispute. In that case it cannot vote.' That is very true. But in that case it has got the fight on its hands, anyhow, because if it is one of the parties to the dispute the war belongs to it. It does not have to go into it. Therefore it cannot be forced by the vote into the war. The only thing the vote can do is to force it out of the war.

"And I want to ask you to think what it means, when it is suggested that the United States may be a party. A party to what? A party to seize somebody's else property? A party to infringe some other country's political independence? Is any one willing to stand on this platform and say that the United States is likely to do either of these things? I challenge any man to stand before an American audience and say that is the danger. "But some one may seek to seize the number of things that men know are not so.

"There is another matter; I have forgotten who it was that said it, but I wouldn't mention his name if I remembered it—that this covenant was an arrangement for the domiwas an arrangement for the domi-nance of Great Britain. They base that upon the fact that in the as-sembly of the council six units of the British Empire are represented, whereas the United States is reprewhereas the United States is represented as only one unit. Alike, in the assembly and the council, the vote of the United States is an absolute veto. We can always veto, always offset with one vote the British six votes. I must say that I look with perfect philosophy upon the difference in number.

Holds Six British Votes Are Justified

"The justification for the representation of more than one part of the British Empire was that the British Empire is made up of semi-independent pieces, as no other empire in the world is. You know how canada for example passes have been considered.

pire in the world is. You know how Canada, for example, passes her own tariff laws, does what she pleases to inconvenience the trade of the mother country.

"The only thing that seems to me weak about the league is that a unanimous vote will sometimes be very difficult to get, and the danger is not action, but inaction. The danger is not that they will do something we do not like, but that, upon some critical occasion, they won't do anycritical occasion, they won't do any critical occasion, they won't do anything.

"Read Article 10 again and read Article 11. Article 11 makes it the right of any member of the league, however weak and small, to call attention to anything anywhere that is likely to disturb the peace of the world and draw it into debate, draw it into the open, draw it where everybody can know the facts, and talk about it. It is the only time, my fellow countrymen, in the history of the world where the weak and oppressed and restive peoples have been pressed and restive peoples have been pressed and restive peoples have been given a hearing.

"The longue of nations makes every secret agreement of every kind invalid. In every direction the safeguards of this treaty are thrown around those who are oppressed.

Declares League Is Not His Handiwork

"My present point is to dissociate the league of nations from the present speaker I did not originate it. It is not my handiwork. It was orig-It is not my handiwork. It was originated out of the consciences and thought of men who wanted justice and peace for generations. And my relation to it is just what my relation ought to be to every public question—the relationship which a man bears to his fellow citizens when he tries to interpret their thought and their consciences. That discinguished history of the Republican party. I do admit that it has been the creator of great constructive policies, and I should be very sorry to see it lose the prestige which it has earned by such policies. I should be very sorry to have any man feel that there is any embarrassment in supporting a great world policy because he belonged to a great constructive party and that party an American party—a party of that people which has done the most advanced thing in the world, and that people which, God helping it, will lead and save the world."
